

Abstract:

A device for machining a strip-shaped or plate-shaped metal workpiece, especially for removing the oxide layer of the cut surfaces and/or edges of the workpiece, comprising at least one rotating conveyor device provided with at least one brush. The conveyor device conveys at least one brush past the region of the workpiece which is to be machined in an approximately linear manner.